Aiming to pursue excellence in the research of solid-state quantum computing and related areas, the International Workshop on Solid-State Quantum Computing (IWSSQC) has brought together researchers from the Greater China region and beyond. The first IWSSQC was held in Nanjing (2007), and then Taipei (2008), Hong Kong (2009), Shanghai (2010), Hong Kong (2011), Beijing (2013), Nanjing (2015), Taipei (2017), Hangzhou (2018), Hong Kong (2021), and Guangzhou (2023).

The 12th IWSSQC take place in Suzhou (China) during 25-27 November 2025, which is jointly organized by Nanjing University (NJU, Suzhou Campus), South China Normal University (SCNU), Quantum Science Center of GD-HK-MC GBA (QSC), and The University of Hong Kong (HKU). IWSSQC2025 will be a three-day meeting, providing an opportunity for the international scientific community to discuss recent experimental and theoretical developments in all aspects of scalable implementations for quantum information processing as well as related areas.

The workshop will feature keynote, invited, and contributed talks, as well as a poster session. Presentations are expected to be delivered in person, although alternative arrangements may be made for special cases upon prior confirmation by the organizers.
